But since the late action of the banks in regard to silver it has been evident that opponents to the banks in both parties are rapidly increasing in numbers. It is regretful that those who are popular at the West, and command much strength at the East. They will claim that the banks, which are established, fostered, and protected by the Government, have in this manner openly defied its laws and refused to treat as money in good standing what Congress has declared to be legal-tender. They will claim that the only just course for Congress to pursue, and the only one that it can measure up to, is to take such steps as will cause the final result of Democratic discussion the party will find itself free from the embarrassment of a war upon the banks. Some Republicans of prominence who have arrived, and to whom the opinions of Major D. Durbin, of New York, have been communicated, believe that such an argument would have a demoralizing effect upon the Republicans, and that a good man would be disposed to give up his seat in the Senate in consideration of the position the banks have taken in regard to silver.

ANGELL.

His Detention in London.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—The case of Angell was considered in Court to-day. So far as I can learn, all the information he has upon the subject. The report has been given out that, because there is no extradition treaty with Portugal, no effort will be made to secure Angell. This report is erroneous. The truth is that, notwithstanding the great mystery which has been made of this matter by the State Department, Angell has really been arrested by the voluntary if not arbitrary action of the Portuguese authorities, and is now in the practical custody of the United States Consul at Lisbon. Of this fact there can be little doubt. If he was not in the custody of somebody, it is difficult to conceive how Secretary Evans could know that 600,000 of the peso money were

FOUNDED UPON HIS PERSON.

ANGELL'S CHANCES FOR ESCAPE.

will be by the intervention of some judicial process through any country which he may pass en route to the United States with which we make no alliance or treaty. If he goes to Spain, he will be captured. If he goes to Portugal, no effort will be made to secure him. The Courts of justice, and those who know the Courts of the Spanish Peninsula, may rest assured that no effort to counteract the purpose of the Government will be made.

ANGELL'S CHANCES FOR ESCAPE.

If, when directly from Portugal to England, a regular writ for extradition could be issued, he would be safe. But no such writs have been issued, neither are the circumstances which led to the detection of Angell known.

HE WILL ESCAPE.

To the Advertiser American Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—At the Cabinet meeting this afternoon Secretary Evans announced that the Foreign Minister had been replaced Charles W. Angell, the defaulter of the Pullman Palace Car Company, in the custody of the United States Consul at Lisbon, and that the extra jurisdiction which exists between the United States and Portugal, but early return to this country may be confidently expected as a matter of international courtesy on the part of the Portuguese Government.

A LOSING BARGAIN.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS TREATY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—Secretary Sherman has caused to be prepared for his forthcoming report a very full statement of the workings of the reciprocity treaty with the Sandwich Islands. When the treaty was discussed in executive session he made a speech against its ratification, on the ground that we cannot afford the loss to our revenues which the proposed reciprocity would cause. He now finds, upon investigating the subject, that he was right in predicting that, in a pecuniary way, the United States would lose heavily by the treaty. The Senate has collected the details of our commerce with the Sandwich Islands, and will present them at length. In summing up, he finds that for the first year of the treaty the duties remitted by the United States are in round numbers $165,000 greater than the amount of the free goods from the United States. For the time indicated were $16,000 greater than the total invoice value of the imports from the United States.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

THE MOONSHINERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—The following telegram was received by the Commissioners of Internal Revenue this morning from Collector of Revenue:

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 22.—Capt. Hoffman's detachment of the revenue force was surrounded on the night of the 19th, in the house where the moonshiners keep their stills in Abbeville County, near the George Washington River, and a number of armed men, at least forty in number, were present. Several shots were fired. It is believed that the efforts of the farmer with whom they were connected were the cause. The officers have withdrawn to Abbeville. Court-house.

Commissioner Hoffman replied as follows:

I have entered his office and the officers of the Internal Revenue would meet with me no further than to assure me that Capt. Hoffman and his men were doing their duty. I am, however, fully satisfied that the men sufficiently to enable him to overcome all resistance, and thoroughly police Abbeville County, making it perfectly safe for him to proceed. I distinctly understand that I will oppose any further sanctity in your State. Offenders must expect to be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

NOTES AND NEWS.

TENNESSEE.

Special Dispatch to the Tribune.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—It is stated by friends of Mr. Clarkson N. Potter that there is a probability that he will consent to stand for Congress in the Twelfth New York District, which he now represents. Mr. Potter declined to be a candidate during the recent campaign for reelection, and is no longer exist.

THE MOONSHINERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—A quorum of the House Committee on Appropriations being in attendance to-morrow, the bill of appropriating the annual appropriation bills was introduced. The general impression seems to be that the departmental estimates cannot be very large, but without detriment to the public service.

and, with a view to the interference of our Government if the facts in the case justify it.

TREASURY ESTIMATES.

The estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury for the support of the Government for the current year, ending June 30, 1880, other than for the permanent annual appropriations, are $129,197,515; for permanent annual appropriations, $14,654,545. These estimates show a decrease of $4,654,545 from those of 1879. Among the decreased sums taken for is $3,929,000 for rivers and harbors, against $5,307,000 the present fiscal year.

THE FISHERY AWARD.

The warrant for the fishery award was to-day drawn at the Treasury for $5,500,000 in coin, and placed to the credit of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Assistant Treasurer at New York.

REDUCED ALLOTMENT.

The Bureau of Construction and Repair has reduced the amounts allotted to the navy yards 20 per cent.

THE FOUR PER CENT.

Subscriptions for the four per cent loan to-day, $1,000.

MORE BONDS TO BE CALLED IN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The Washington dispatch says: "The Bureau of Construction and Repair has allotted $50,000 of the 5% 5 per cents may be expected this afternoon or to-morrow. This will make $60,000 called for redemption this year with the proceeds of sales of 4 per cents."

ACCIDENTS IN WISCONSIN.

Special Dispatch to the Tribune.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 22.—Patrick Garver, an aged farmer from Hartford, Washington County, fell into the river to-day and was drowned.

EDWARD KITTRIDGE.

Edward Kittridge, formerly of this city, and the son of W. E. Kittridge, had recently been employed as an engineer on a Southwestern railroad, had lost his legs cut off yesterday by an accident on the road where he was employed. To-day a dispatch was received announcing his death as the result of the accident.

STEAMER SUNK.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 22.—The steamer War Eagle, of the Keokuk Northern Line, while waiting out from the Superior Landing, seven miles from St. Louis, struck a rock, which sent waves, broke holes in her hull, and sunk in four feet of water. No damage to freight, as she had none. She will be pumped out immediately.

BURNED TO DEATH.

CARDO, Nov. 22.—Tillie Sherman, a colored child, was burned to death to-day while alone in the house. The fact was only discovered after the burning garments had set fire to the bedding, and the door was broken open by the firemen.

FIRES.

AT CLINTON JUNCTION, WIS.

Special Dispatch to the Tribune.

JAMESVILLE, WIS., Nov. 22.—The cooper-shop of Robert Henningsen, at Clinton Junction, burned at 10:30 last night. Loss, probably $2,000 insurance, $1,400. The steam flour mill of W. S. Sease & Co. had a very narrow escape.

AT MELAMORA, MICH.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 22.—At Melamora this afternoon Donaldson's hardware store and Mulier's meat-market were destroyed and McKee's carriage-shop slightly injured by fire. Loss about $2,000. For a time the entire destruction of the village was threatened.

AT MAYVILLE, N. Y.

MAYVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The fire which started in the Post-office burned eleven stores, causing a loss of about $30,000; insurance $10,000.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

like a pendulum. They were bound to themselves. If you attempt to move forces of attraction and which is the only way to utilize the force, you will find that the one is weaker than the other. It was not so, if you could cause your mind to act as to bring the turn on an axis, each time it happened. In a smaller area until they results by displacement the north pole from the south pole of another to been attracted on to the south pole you have a force more attractive power. Of course it is the magnets attract and repel them in the same force as that hold them in the other case, generally. If you have permanent magnet, the motor would have permanent magnet of say at 1000 which Miss Hosmer at the results of the claims, but of course what is magnetism?"

SENATOR BECK

Wandy Schemers at Chicago—He Was in Their Convention, and His Hand in Them—Speaks His Mind—Schemers' Expose.

IN, K., Nov. 18.—Senator James R. Beck, who had been to attend the Commercial Convention, has given his opinion to the consideration of the question before such a Convention, and, as he had been in the newspapers, through the Assemblies, as having taken part in the regular representative waited upon as possible to learn his views as to the aims and objects of the Convention, was to learn that Mr. Beck was in attendance at the Convention, sponsored by the Governor to represent.

ETING OF SUBSIDY SCHEMERS. He used his opinion of the Convention and emphasis, feeling evidently that he was to be supposed to take any action, so as to be willing to do what he could for the purpose, while the others, as those secured what that, is the fundamental view of subsidy monopoly, or else a subsidy is made part of every ticks, tariffs, and subsidies, seem all they ask by some right to want anything. They come to their own, and their raids on the which has to be made, by the most unjust and expensive war. I see how this people can be got to pay revenue taxes, and subsidize any of what ought to be done.

THE SOUTH EASTERN DISTRICT. The South East is radically in favor of the Chicago Convention and means of building up our country, and had grown wide wide, the interview inquired what were views as to the best means to accomplish.

They are too big a question to answer words. Our chief object is to be ready to build ships, and our nation to prohibit us from buying foreign vessels, and the balance in the carrying trade. The was revenue tariff. The present system has driven us from the donations, and so far as to reach the Pacific Ocean. We have come land west of the Mississippi, and the thirteen original more money in ports, and interest of them than it cost to carry the from the inauguration of Gen. Grant in 1869 broke out, in the trade of the Pacific and over the Pacific Ocean. You are the landing of the goods we need, and subsidies are demanded, while these obstacles to commerce are kept. Yet the are kept monopoly and subsidy have to be gained in all order the part of the public minded.

THE INSOLENT BANKS.

The following is a favorable one to Senator's views in relation to the and especially the recent New York bankers in regard to the the intercession met with a success, enough to make this said, in substance: "If I understand correctly, I regard it as not the highest degree of corruption, and the creatures of Congress, or, failing in that, the execution of the laws, they are free government, and their characters are exposed." I fear that they have formed monopolies, especially of some kind, some time, which by to the people, so as to contract at once, the threats they have made against the silver dollar will, in importance of place, restrain from entering into the necessary steps, either by reducing their notes directly in some other way let them be kept as officers of the Congress of the United

A STUDY OF WORDSWORTH.
We cannot speak in unmeasured words of Mr. Calvert's "Study of Wordsworth." It is a review, quite appreciative. The author is himself a biographic, esthetic study, and is biographic for the salient events in Wordsworth's life imbedded in a mass of discertation which we presume is meant to be esthetic. Mr. Calvert informs us in verse and prose that he had the pleasure of shaking hands with Wordsworth, and of speaking to him more than once. The verse gives us the impression that he enjoyed a considerable measure of close personal friendship with Wod-sworth; but the poem states over and over that his acquaintance was of a rather abstractive character. To illustrate Mr. Calvert's form of writing, we give a few lines:

The deep, restless ocean which swathes all our days in its pinching immensity, which, as we sail on, seems to grow wider and wider, but you look despondingly and angrily at the stolid sea because of the destruction of your fate.

Our readers will agree with us that a protected wattle with polyglot monsters like the Leviathan we have to face, will not be exhausted by the author's study.

Mr. Calvert's method of esthetic study is wonderful. He has had a quoted closely upon himself, he has studied it.

And the reader will find the Wordsworth in the book very excellent, if he is not so enthralled over the Calvert setting.

He has given us a picture placed in the rank of English poets that we must say back to the Commonwealth to find his possessor in Milton.

Time was when apocryphos for him was the name of Wordsworth.

THE HOME.

PAPA'S LETTER.
Writing letters, when I least.
Please, dear mother, don't tell me
Mamma mustn't be disturbed.

But I've lived of the best,
With many a thing to do.
Writing letters, is "ou, mama!"
That I write a letter, too.

"Not now, darling, mamma's busy;
Run and play with kitty now."

"No, no, mama, we write letter—Taa, if 'will' show us how."

I could point my darling's portrait
As his sweet eyes searched my face—
Hair of gold and eyes of azure,
Form of chickin, witching grace.

But the eager face was clouded,
As I slowly shook my head,
Till I said, "I'll make a letter
Or you, darling boy, instead."

So I part'd back the tresses
From his forehead, high and white,
And a stamp in sport I patted
'Mid its waves of golden light.

Then I said, "Now, little letter,
Go away, and bear good news!"

And I sauled down the staircase
Clattered loud the little steps.

Leaving me, the darling hurried
Down to Mary at his gie.

"Mama's writing lots of letters,
I've a letter, Mary—see!"

No one heard the little prints,
As I dash'd down the stairs,
Reached his little cap and stopped,
Standing on the entry stairs.

No one heard the front door open,
No one saw the golden hair,
As it floated o'er his shoulders
In the crisp October air.

The street the baby hastened,
Till he reached the open door;

"I've a letter, Mr. Postman;
Is there room for more?"

"Cassie's letter's done," to peep:
"Papa lives with God, 'ou know,
Mama sent me for a letter;
Does 'ou 'nk 't can go?"

But the clerk in wonder answered,
"Not to-day, my little man."

"Den I find another office."
"Cause I need it if I can."

Fain the clerk would have detained him,
But the pleasing face was gone,

And the little feet were hastening—
By the busy crowd swept on.

Suddenly the crowd was parted,
People fled from left to right,

As a pair of malediced horses
At the moment dashed in sight.

No one saw the baby figure—
No one saw the golden hair,

Till a pair of bright eyes twinkled
Burst upon the autumn air.

Twas too late—a moment only
Stood the beauteous vision there,

Then the little face lay lifeless—
Covered o'er with golden hair.

Everlastingly raised thy darling,
Beneath thy breath of cold,

Saw the stamp upon the forehead,
Growing so icy cold.

Not a mark the face disclosed;
Such a look of death in her red;

But a little life was ended—
"Papa's Letter" was with God.

OPPORONUS.

MATERNAL DUTIES.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 18.—All had to leave, Opponous, though in a way, I am sure, a party of seven nineteen, living on a gaily internet, or perhaps a veritable Chanticleer himself. It matters little, for thou has set a breeze in motion to stir up the sombre monotony of the house, which has pleased in silence, and a gaudy offering. Where is the romance, the poetry, the enchantment, the beatitudes of such a home?—and, pretty!—and, what a life!—and, what a home!—and, what a wife!—and, what a husband!

B. Sanderson.—This is a fine variety for pedaling during summer; flowers yellow. B. Glauca, flowers orange.

B. Variegata.—A wife will choose this for her husband's lack of attention. They are so indifferent of all damps indifference wears, the wife is so plump, so fat, so well fed, so well dressed, so plenty before marriage. Ask him how he feels, what he has seen; get his slippers. I have a son, and he is a true boy, who loves to spend his time at a boarding-house; there is no better time to begin than when first married. If you are not quite ready, buy a friend.

I have found more than space, so simply add, this is the experience and judgment of only one. VERTAND GREEN.

THE HOME CLUB.

ITS PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The meeting of Nov. 20 passed off, as I expected, with a large amount of business transacted for the fund, and a good share of enthusiasm over the organization's results. But before I give the outline of the proposed winter's campaign I will briefly refer to the donations the officers could confidently expect forward to the young-fewer sufferers, but which, from a number of causes, have not yet reached its destination. In the first place, I found, after a unanimous vote in favor of the actions of the working members, that by far the largest number of non-workers were opposed to breaking into the fund. Their excuse was: "It is a benevolent institution, for the founding of it that it should be turned into a foreign channel for the funds." A committee was appointed to the work of investigating the claim, and in our favor a sufficient sum of money was collected, though the offering was not so large as we had expected. To the credit of the officers, however, the contributions poured into the insect-sickler's purse were sufficient to meet the expense of the meager donation, though the offering was not so large as we had expected.

On the second day, the officers of the Home Club, who had been so anxious to have the contributions was crowded out, together with many others, wishes to those who sent their various things for distribution among the poor. She will write to those who have not been paid.

Special Correspondence of The Tribune.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Lord Dundreary made a flyer to London last week, and I found him at his hotel in Victoria.

Landladies are by no means rare in dramatic biography of men who while upon the stage were excessively comic, but when away from the inspiring influence of the footlights were as solemn as a funeral—solitary beings who in private life were as much of an insufferable bore to themselves as to their friends.

Sothern is not of that kidney. Out of the theatre he is the essence of geniality. In America I have had the pleasure of meeting him in scores of places, and have enjoyed his company in his rooms, and in his dressing room after the play, about midnight, surrounded by a small party of congenial friends at the supper-table, when his wit and gaiety seemed but a continuation in private life of the merriment he had been presenting on the stage for three hours preceding. I have seen him in all sorts of places, where one would think he would shine most advantageously, but to see Dundreary at his best you have to meet him.

IN THE PLACE HE CALLS HIS HOME, surrounded by members of his family and friends of many years' standing.

The stage door of his home, surrounded by well-dressed gardeners or serving-women; as there it is situated in a terrace, or a suite, or a crescent, forbidding in its aristocratic solemnity.

It is found in the upper portion of a modest building planted almost in the heart of the city's bricks and mortar, an easy walk from the Haymarket, and just over the roar and bustle of Oxford street. Insurance offices and drapery stores, tobacconists and other dealers in scattered about the quiet and jocund air of a theatre, and boutiques mostly line the ear. Orientation is entirely absent. You have to pass through a narrow door peculiar to the quarter, and up a dingy staircase to the drawing-room, graced with French taste in the hangings and furniture, but having superadded a quiet of comfort which distinguishes a well-appointed English home—here you have to enter the home of an artist and a man of culture.

At a glance you see the perfect appointments, with masses of curious and beautiful things, artful filings up of corners with valuable knick-knacks from every quarter of the earth.

The story of many happy active years lies there.

Enter and you find folios, books and pictures, skins and skeletons, specimens of birds and butterflies, terra-cotta groups, and curious pieces of furniture, and boxes of costly presents, tributes from far and near, from strangers and from loving hands, and, who comes forward to greet you with a cigar in one hand and a warm grasp of welcome in the other. There is nothing of the social hypocrite about that grasp; nothing of the man who "slaps backs off" malice aforethought," sits up, and drinks toddy when he would be in bed. There is nothing of the man who is a bore, and gives an exuberant welcome to people whom he heartily wishes at the devil. Off the stage he is a robust, jolly, good-natured man, with gay hair and a jolly broad mouth, eyes and cheeks cheery. He is a convivial, bonhomie in his welcome, which, together with the amazement, make him a生人. The audience, the critics, as he is led into the room filled with a company of the witty, laughing men and women.

FINALLY, SOTHERN HIMSELF,

In the course of conversation, he spoke of his tour, and said, "I am going to slip across the ocean early in December," he said.

"You know I open in New York the 23d of that month."

"Yes; but have you anything new to give us?"

"Why, my boy, I've two new pieces, and will probably have other two. The American engagement will begin in January."

"It has been tried in London."

"And made an immense hit. The people in the provinces didn't generally take to it, however."

"It is a marvellous comedy in three acts by Byron. The title is 'Dundreary's Private Theatricals.' I've had this piece in my mind six or seven years, and thought it should be a hit."

"The last act ends with 'Dundreary rehearing 'Hamlet.' Then Byron has another for me, and so has Albany. So you see I am prepared."

"Are you taking any people with you now to America?" I asked.

"Yes."

NELL LUCY BUCKTON,

Daughter of Buckton, late of the Hay-market.

"I, and she is a daughter worth her father. She is young, trusting, and already clever confidante. Then there will be Miss Julia Stewart, W. Harckraves, and Frederick Densmore."

"How long do you intend to remain in America this time?"

"I plan to be back with Christmas, 1879."

"And you Westerns do you know anything about them?"

"No. My Western tour depends altogether upon the Western tour."
